Summary:

The battle of Jutland during the First World War saw the last major engagement of Naval Battleships. In May 1916 the Royal Navy's Grand Fleet and the Imperial German Navy's High Seas Fleet came together in an intense battle to fight for control of key shipping routes in the North Sea. In total, 250 ships came together during the battle and significant losses were felt on both sides; the British Navy losing 14 ships and the Germans 11. Both sides claimed victory; the British lost more ships and twice as many sailors but the outcome succeeded in containing the German fleet. 100 years on, this lecture will discuss the battle itself as well as the types and build of ships that took part.
